Ice Cream
At Home

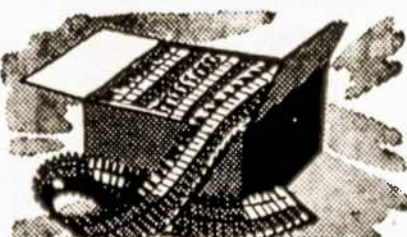

Perhaps you cannot purchase as much ice cream at the corner store as you did before the war, but that does not necessitate an ice cream shortage in your home.

After all, the art of making ice cream did not pass out with grandmother's old crank freezer. In fact, modern refrigeration has probably doubled or tripled the amount of this delicacy prepared at home. Today, old crank freezers are being oiled and used, while electric refrigerators are humming a tune as they freeze trays of ice cream for the evening meal.

An ordinary household rennet tablet, some light (yes, light) cream, a little sugar, water and vanilla — that's all you need to try the modern recipe below.

Homemade Vanilla Ice Cream

- (Automatic Refrigerator)
1 rennet tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
2 cups light cream
1/2 cup sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1. Dissolve rennet tablet by crushing in cold water.
 2. Mix light cream, sugar and vanilla. Warm slowly, stirring constantly. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (110° F.) not hot, remove at once from heat.
 3. Add dissolved rennet tablet and stir quickly for a few seconds only. Pour at once, while still liquid, into refrigerator tray. Let stand at room temperature until set — about 10 minutes.
 4. Place in freezing compartment. Freeze until firm. Remove from tray to a bowl, break up with a fork and beat with electric or rotary beater until free from hard lumps but still a thick mass. Finish freezing.

YOUR HOME OF TOMORROW

It is never too soon to begin planning the home you intend to buy or build after the war.

But too many people, today, are basing their plans upon fancy, not fact. They are laboring under the delusion that post-war homes will be radically different.

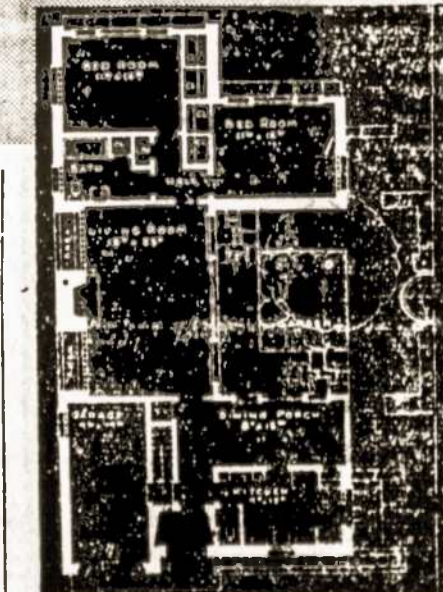

Planning like this can only lead to disappointment. The fact is this—tomorrow's homes will be like the best built just before the war. They will reflect progress, but they will not be revolutionary in design, materials, or plan.

Take this house for example, which was designed by two out-

Note the large picture window in the spacious living room. The window and door which frame this fixed window, slide open. At the opposite end of the living room, the wide-hearthed fireplace is flanked by glass block panels, adding beauty and distinction to the room as a whole.

To provide privacy, even for a narrow lot for which this house has been designed, window openings facing neighbors are largely of glass block instead of clear glass. Clear glass sash are set into the window opening above the block for ventilation.

Think of this house built of ledge stone with its low roof line, covered with brightly colored fire-resistant asphalt shingles to assure long trouble-free life. Look over the open floor plan, the large rooms, generous closets, the efficient, completely equipped kitchen, and its terraces for outdoor living. Here, truly, is a house designed for better, more gracious living. This post-war house plan has been approved by the National Association of Home Builders.

HERE'S a cut-away photograph of an M-4 medium tank, giving the public a glimpse of the interior mechanism and structure of the General Sherman, a major factor in the rout of the Germans in the North African and Sicilian campaigns. Indicated in the photo is the pilot's compartment at the lower left just behind the drive sprocket; the location of shells for the 75 mm cannon; the engine and transmission; and many other details. Fisher Body Division of General Motors alone, has turned out more than 11,000 of the M-4 and its equally famous combat mate, the M-10 tank destroyer.
